Reserve Generation 'Drug Free'

Reserve Generation represents the U.S. Air Force and U.S. Air Force Reserve in locations throughout the United States. They entertain and educate thousands of elementary and middle school students each year, performing a unique blend of popular music interlaced with a positive drug free message and exciting light and sound show.

A dazzling display of laser lights and high energy music captures the attention of the audience. This 45-minute show of sights and sounds features some original compositions, as well as some popular songs from well-known artists such as Mariah Carey, Celine Dion and The Winans. Everything from rap, to rock and ballads is covered in this show. There's something for everyone.

Vocalist Technical Sergeant Timothy Fountain of Baker Hill, Alabama leads Reserve Generation, and sings alongside vocalist Senior Airman Tammy Boone. The rhythm section is driven by Staff Sergeant Rob Walker, the group's musical director, on guitar from Warner Robins, Georgia; Senior Airman Kurt Morrow from Wichita, KS on bass guitar; Staff Sergeant Craig Stevens from Denver, CO on keyboard and vocals and Senior Airman Dustin Hertz on drums from Oakdale, Louisiana.

The enthusiasm and professionalism of Reserve Generation has captivated listeners of all ages throughout the United States to include Philadelphia, PA ; Charleston, WV; Greenbay, WI; Tupelo, MS; Atlanta, GA; New York, NY and Miami, FL. They have been sharing their drug-free message since 1990, earning them national recognition and the 1995 Department of Defense Anti-Drug Awareness Award.
